Identifying Barriers to Electoral Participation of Indigenous Peoples, Latin America, and the Caribbean

Questions and Answers

August 8, 2022

Q1. The work calls for analyzing the elements of discrimination faced by Indigenous Peoples to exercise their right to vote.

In this frame, it is understood that the scope of this work is circumscribed to:

- the ways in which citizen are informed about the candidacy and its proposals
- the voting journey and its conditions
- the access to information about the voting results?

If it is not like that, please describe precisely the scope of the work.

IFES Response: The research conducted by the subawardee and IFES will include all parts of the electoral cycle, such as: legal framework, voter education, voter registration, voting, serving as an electoral official (such as a poll worker), candidacy and party participation, and electoral results. Particulars of the project will be determined jointly by the subawardee and IFES.
